CCLI Song # 5173556

These hands that should embrace You, Lord
Instead have drawn a rebelâ€™s sword.
My wayward will has dealt the blow
That pierced Your son so long ago.

My actions, Lord, should build Your name,
Instead they labor for my fame.
While outwardly I bless the Son,
I seek manâ€™s praise for what Iâ€™ve done.

C
Chorus:
Lord, this glory-seeking hunger tries
To pull my heart from You:
Such a dark, unwelcome guest who hides
In everything I do.
But Your grace remains and pleads for me:
â€œDestroy this enemy!â€•
For the cross still stands
And meets my deepest need.

This heart should worship You alone;
Instead to trifles it is prone.
My tears are drawn by earthly things
But flee when with the saints I sing.

My words should tell of all the grace
You've shown in saving me by faith;
Instead I use my tongue to spin
A web to minimize my sin.
